Nottinghamshire Eco Fuels, a specialist supplier of biomass heating systems and environmentally friendly solid fuels, recently benefited from Ashfield & Mansfield's Graduates into Enterprise programme. They were so impressed with their placement graduate that they offered her a full-time position.

Nottinghamshire Eco Fuels, based at Portland Training College just outside Mansfield, use renewable resources to process and manufacture wood fuels for heating. They are wholesalers and UK distributors for several leading brands of wood fuel, providing a wide product range, available both locally and nationally, to suit a variety of appliances and heating requirements.

Nottinghamshire Eco Fuels benefited from the Graduates into Enterprise programme, which matched the company to a knowledgeable graduate to help them establish a new service: offering wood fuel quality testing. The recent graduate in Environmental Management also helped the company develop quality management systems and wood moisture monitoring over time to see how it dries out.

Through our Graduates into Enterprise Programme Nottinghamshire Eco Fuels benefited from technical and practical expertise in an area with great potential for rapid expansion and growth and were so impressed by the business development benefits that they offered the recent graduate a full-time position.

The graduate worked closely with Managing Director, Mark Thomas, to undertake electronic moisture measuring tests using specialist equipment, then compared these to laboratory tests. Mark was really pleased with the graduate's performance and her contribution to the business. He commented that significant business benefits would really begin to emerge once the new wood fuel testing service was up and running.
